Creative Solutions. Innovative Designs.

When presented with the challenge of renovating the entire 103,000 SF John Glenn High School while still occupied, the East Muskingum Local School District chose Davis Architectural Group to be on the design team. Reputation, responsiveness, creativity and Davis’ exceptional experience with educational facilities (including prior work on an elementary school in the district) made DAG the preferred architect for East Muskingum Local Schools’ extensive project.

Applying knowledge and creativity to district objectives, Davis presented a plan for renovating the existing high school and adding 38,000 SF to the building over a two-year period. Students and teachers missed zero days of class during the renovations.

Davis improved the building’s functionality by designing new corridors, new vertical circulation patterns, a new kitchen and cafeteria, new sprinkler system and a new gymnasium. Building security was updated through technological upgrades, new security doors and access controls. Choice of colors and use of space makes everyone feel comfortable.

The newly constructed gymnasium, which has a mezzanine level on one side and an attractive lobby showcasing the high school’s Hall of Fame is a source of pride for the entire community.

“This is not your average cookie-cutter gym. We hear visiting teams and fans comparing it to other gymnasiums,” states James E. Heagen, Superintendent.

Overall, renovations went pretty smoothly until a quality issue arose with the contractor. Heagen says, “Even though DAG was not in any way responsible, they became part of the solution and helped us resolve problems to ensure overall building quality for the district.”
